

Dr. Carrie Wijesinghe, MD, FAAP is a highly accomplished and respected pediatrician based in Henderson. With over 23 years of experience, she is the founder of Siena Pediatrics, a renowned pediatric practice in the area. Dr. Carrie completed her medical education at MCP/Hahnemann, which later became Drexel University School of Medicine in Philadelphia. She then pursued her pediatric residency in North Carolina.

Before establishing Siena Pediatrics, Dr. Carrie gained valuable experience by working at several large pediatric practices in Henderson. Her commitment to the field of pediatrics has earned her various accolades and recognition throughout her career. She served as the Chief of Pediatrics at St. Rose Siena for an impressive six-year period from 2010 to 2016.

Dr. Carrie's expertise and dedication have been acknowledged by the medical community and patients alike. She was voted as a Top Doc in Las Vegas Seven in 2011 and 2013, and she received the Top Doctor award from HealthCare Quarterly in 2017, 2018, 2019, and 2020. Additionally, she was named one of the Top 3 Pediatricians in Henderson by ThreeBestRated.com for the years 2020, 2021, and 2022.

In 2021, Dr. Carrie embarked on a new venture as a daytime news anchor at Channel 8, in a medical series called "Pointers with a Pediatrician." This collaboration allowed her to share her knowledge and insights with a broader audience, further contributing to the well-being of children in the community.

Dr. Carrie Wijesinghe's impressive qualifications, extensive experience, and commitment to providing exceptional care have made her a highly esteemed pediatrician in Henderson. Her dedication to her patients and the field of pediatrics continues to positively impact the lives of children and families in the community.